SELNET ALERT 41

Dear SELNET member,

Based on feedback received from various members of SELNET and on the recent discussion on the BoD of SELNET regarding the possibility of establishing a master's program in sarcomas taught by faculty affiliated with the network, we would like to explore the options available according to the models offered by different universities in Latin America. To this end, we plan to issue a call for proposals (several universities have already expressed interest) to facilitate informed decisions on the most suitable program structure. Should this program be implemented, it would address the critical need for specialized training among medical and scientific professionals involved in the diagnosis, treatment, care, and research of patients with sarcomas.

Those interested in applying in partnership with a university must send the following information to Isabel Marin (Project Manager of SELNET) via email:

Please include in the email subject:

Call for Proposals – SELNET Master's Program (Deadline: Dec 15)

- The university with which discussions have been held to establish this international master's program.
- Faculty conditions (preference will be given to those that are flexible in this regard, as SELNET ideally wishes to select the faculty).
- The estimated cost per student (lower-cost proposals will be favored).
- Duration.
- Preferably a virtual format (a portion of the program could be scheduled in person to coincide with one of the two annual meetings).
- Marketing and visibility plans (indicating whether the university will participate in promotional activities).

Applicants submitting a proposal in collaboration with a university are kindly requested to do so before December 15th.

Sincerely,

SELNET Executive Committee
